*"Transcended Earth"-
A study using clay to heighten spiritual awareness in the outdoors*

This workshop will demonstrate and give participants a chance to use the creative process, by working in clay, to learn more about themselves and develop a deeper relationship with the natural world.

The first part will feature slide show presentations, group discussions, reflective journaling, and instructor demonstration. Participants will then work on an assortment of ceramic hand-building exercises under the guidance of the instructor, which will focus on how to use the ceramic materials to communicate visually the ideas developed.

The second part will take place in the exceptional outdoor surroundings found at GOLS. That's right! Participants will step out of the classroom and trek down through the bamboo corridor, into the hardwood forest, and down to the clay banks by the river. There, we will work collaboratively to create a high/low relief mural into the clay bank. Using the river's water, we will create a pure white clay slip, which is the consistency of paint, and coat the exposed clay surface in the woods and by the river. Using various techniques and approaches, participants will carve and manipulate, into the "canvases", exposing the contrasting pre-existing red clay. The resulting piece(s) created will serve to document the group's personal and collaborative relationship with the natural world. The work will eventually erode back to its primary source of origin, as clay is the last geologic process, and participants will have the journey of their experience as the permanent impression.
